RISC OS 3 PRM Released

Acorn Computers has released the latest version of its Programmers' Reference Manual containing all the information required to exploit the features of RISC OS 3:

The manual has been totally restructured to take account of the differences between programming for RISC OS 2 and RISC OS 3 and is now in excess of 3,000 pages long - almost double the size of the original PRM:

The manual is contained in four high quality, compact bound volumes plus an additional index volume: It will also include a newly revised RISC OS Style Guide, available from the autumn: (Those who buy the new PRM before this date will be sent a copy of the Style Guide as soon as it is available:)

Acorn's Product Manager, Neil Gardner explained that the new manuals had been designed with ease of use in mind: "As an added bonus, we have included many programming examples in the text, and there are also detailed sections describing ways to exploit the various aspects of programming for RISC OS:" he said.

The Programmers' Reference Manual costs £99.

Upgrades for existing owners of the RISC OS 2 PRM are available for £59, plus £4 postage and packing, from Vector Services Ltd:, 13 Dennington Road, Wellingborough, Northants, NN8 2RL: Cheques should be made payable to "Acorn Direct" and the index front cover of the old manual only should be sent as proof of ownership of the RISC OS 2 version.
